DETAILED ACTION

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

1. The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

2. Claims 1-4, 6-8, and 10-16 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Steele et al., Pub. No.: US 2002/00466084.

Regarding claims 1, Steele et al. (herein, Steele) disclose a remotely configurable multimedia entertainment and information system with location based advertising (figures 1 and 2). Steele's disclosure comprises a display (160 and page 3, left column, paragraph number 0047, which reads on a display; loudspeakers (152 and page 3, right column, paragraph 0045, which reads on loudspeakers; and channel selector (162), which indicates an input apparatus (page 3, paragraph 0048); memory (90) and microprocessor and storage devices (92), which read on storage device and a processor, respectively - page 3, right column, paragraph 0045; further, the processor includes a element for displaying different channels of different types of audio data can be located (figures 2 and 5, page 3, paragraphs 0050-0051 and 0054), which indicates displaying directories, the processor includes a memory and coupled to storage devices for recording real-time audio or multimedia files (page 3, paragraph 0046), further the broadcast channels (e.g. AM, FM, DAB, Internet broadcast) indicates different data carriers, and it obvious the different multimedia files (MP3 audio files) are displayed with different tiles, wherein this is a common characteristic of MP3 audio technology, and the different directories and files are accessible by channel selector. However, Steele fails to disclose the processor decoding the multimedia files. Decoding of multimedia files was well known in the art.

Decoding multimedia files (audio) that have been transmitted to a receiver is a commonly used techniques for processing transmitted data files. Thus it would have been obvious to one of the ordinary skill in the art at the time the invention was made to modify the invention of Steele by incorporating the technique of decoding the multimedia files (audio) for the purpose of regenerating the contents of the files in its original format for adequate output.

Regarding claim 2, Steele discloses everything claimed as applied above (see claim 1). Steele further discloses that multimedia files (MP3 files) may be download from a home personal computer to the multimedia player of a vehicle (page 5, paragraph 0073), which indicates the claimed limitations.

Regarding claim 3, Steele discloses everything claimed as applied above (see claim 2). Steele further discloses a button cluster controller (figure 4), which indicates a plurality of controlling elements, therein as claimed for managing the directory of the new storage location.

Regarding claim 4, Steele discloses everything claimed as applied above (see claim 1). Steele further discloses a channel selector (162) that may be manipulated up, down, forward and backward (page 3, paragraph 0048), which constitutes as the input apparatus including a rocker as claimed.

Regarding claim 6, Steele discloses everything claimed as applied above (see claim 1). Steele further discloses the storage as being flash disks, other storage media suitable for an automobile (page 3, paragraph 0046), or floppy disks (page 5, paragraph 0084), which indicates the storage as being removable for the disk drive.

Regarding claim 7, Steele discloses everything claimed as applied above (see claim 6). Steele obviously decodes a 1st multimedia file with a 1st title of one of the different data carriers making is sufficient for audio playback via the loudspeakers.

Regarding claim 8, Steele discloses everything claimed as applied above (see claim 1). Steele obviously discloses the processor extracting information for the multimedia file as obvious by the fact that extracted information is displayed as to what channels and type of music the file contains (figure 5) for the purpose of allowing user to be aware of the type of file being selected and to be played back.

Regarding claims 10-12, Steele discloses everything claimed as applied above (see claim 1). Steele obviously discloses the processor playback one of the multimedia data files of one of the different data carriers in a random sequence by the user being able to select particular files to be played (page 3, paragraphs 0050-0054).

Regarding claim 13, Steele discloses everything claimed as applied above (see claim 1). Steele further discloses the storage as being hard drives, flash disks, other storage media suitable for an automobile or floppy disks (page 5, paragraph 0084) (page 3, paragraph 0046),

Regarding claim 14, Steele discloses everything claimed as applied above (see claim 1). Steele further discloses the multimedia files as MP3 files (page 3, paragraph 0046 and page 5 paragraph 0073), which indicates the multimedia data files coded in MP3.

Art Unit: 2644

Regarding claim 15, Steele discloses everything claimed as applied above (see claim 1). Steele fails to disclose a remote control apparatus. The examiner maintains that remote control devices were well known in the art. The use of remote control devices for manipulation of electronic devices is a common practice in the art. It would have been obvious to one of the ordinary skill in the art at the time the invention was made to modify the invention of Steele by implementing a remote control apparatus for the purpose of providing input or control manipulations, such as file or channel selection with convenience and ease to user.

Regarding claim 16, Steele discloses everything claimed as applied above (see claim 1). Steele further indicates in figure 5, the processor displaying information step-by-step.

3. Claims 5 and 9 are objected to as being dependent upon a rejected base claim, but would be allowable if rewritten in independent form including all of the limitations of the base claim and any intervening claims.

Prior Art

4. The prior art made of record and not relied upon is considered pertinent to applicant's disclosure.

Abecassis, U. S. Patent No. 6192340, discloses integration of music from a personal library with real-time information.
